Meet and Greet

Meet Dr. Sherri Davis, Academic Dean & Director of Developmental Programs

 Dr. Sherri Davis is the Academic Dean and Director of Developmental Programs at Lawson State Community College. She has a Ph.D. in Education Administration & Research from the University of Southern Mississippi; a Masters degree in Education from the award winning Cambridge College; and a Bachelors degree in Communications and Journalism from Hampton University.

Her career in education started in 1990 as a high school English teacher in Washington, D.C. In fact, Dr. Davis looks back at her high school teaching days as one of the happiest times in her life. She was lucky, for as a beginning teacher, she was surrounded by seasoned teachers who were dedicated to her development as an instructor. They had not had a new English teacher for years, so when she came, to them, it was like a breath of fresh air. Indeed, they focused their attention on filling her head with everything they could think of in terms of effective teaching strategies. As a result, within three years of this constant nurturing, she became a confident, proficient teacher beyond her years. More importantly, that experience shaped her belief that the most important thing that teachers need, regardless of time on the job, is training and support.

In 1993, Dr. Davis left Washington, D.C. and continued teaching high school English at Olympic Heights, a state-of-the-art high school. In 1995, she was nominated and served as a POP (Professional Orientation Program) instructor. Here, top instructors within the Palm Beach County School System were identified and trained to mentor beginning teachers and evaluate their performance within the system. In December of 1999, she left Florida to continue her education and met her husband, Dr. Derrick Davis.

In January 2001, Dr. Davis accepted a principalship at Washington School in Birmingham, Alabama and shortly thereafter joined the ranks of Lawson State. She has served as Director of Developmental Education since that time and loves her job. In 2002, she was promoted to Coordinator of Staff and Program Support, but was later named Academic Dean (in 2005).
